

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

INTRODUCTORY NOTE.

The manuscript record here printed for the first time was deposited in the archival annex of the Virginia State Library some months ago, with other manuscript material, by the Hon. Charles A. Johnston, State Treasurer, for safe-keeping. It appears to be a record kept for convenience in the period immediately preceding the Revolutionary War by that official whom it most concerned to have at hand a list of all the justices of the peace of the various counties of colonial Virginia. This official was probably the Secretary of the Colony, whose duty it was to issue commissions to the justices, or it may possibly have been the clerk of the Executive Council, who acted also, no doubt, as the clerk of the Governor. Though the commissions were prepared by the Secretary of the Colony, or in his office, they were signed by the Governor, who had the right of appointment, with and by the advice of the Council.

Whether, however, originally made in the office of the Secretary of the Council or in that of the Secretary of the Colony, the record is undoubtedly an authentic one, and it is, for the later entries at least, contemporary with the issuance of the commissions recorded. It may be relied upon as being accurate. From this arises its peculiar value.

The aim has been to publish the manuscript exactly as it is, except for the check-marks which frequently appear in front of the names. The reproduction of these did not seem to be at all essential. All the notations, such as "dead," "removed," "out of country," etc., are printed accurately, since they give information. Both in the interests of accuracy and as a reminder of the age of the manuscript, even the abbreviations appearing in the original are given as nearly as can be done by the use merely of usual modern type. For the sake of the references made in the preface, the page numbers of the manuscript are indicated.

The preface has been written, after close study of the manuscript, by Mr. Edward Ingle, a student of the colonial history of Virginia, and the author, when engaged in postgraduate work at the Johns Hopkins University, of a monograph, "Local Institutions of Virginia," later published as Nos. 2 and 3, Series 3, of the Johns Hopkins University Studies in Historical and Political Science;

Baltimore, 1885. His work upon the preface has been done merely because of his interest in the subject. I wish to express my hearty thanks to Mr. Ingle, not only for the actual performance of the task, but also for the admirable spirit shown by him in carrying it through.

H. R. McILWAINE.

PREFACE.

"Virginians of Affairs, 1757-1775" might be fit title of the collection of names printed on the following pages. The collection is interesting in its appeal to historian, antiquarian and genealogist as much because of the obscurity of the history of the manuscript colonial document upon which it is based and the uncertainty as to the purpose of the record itself as because of its value as an index of the personnel during the decade preceding the American Revolution of that influential body of men in the Old Dominion known as Justices of the County Courts.

The record has 106 paper pages, 15x10 inches, many of them beautifully watermarked. A number of the pages are quite fragile, and a few of them have been mutilated at their corners by time. They are protected by modern pasteboard covers, with leather back, encased in canvas. If they ever had an identifying title, it has been lost. The word, "Justices," and the figures, "1762 1775," stamped on the canvas case, and the inscription, "List of Justices 1762 1775," in lead-pencil on a flyleaf, all obviously of comparatively recent date, have suggestion in some of the notations in the record. But the dates are not as comprehensive as they should be. For, there are lists for 1757, 1760 and 1761, as well as for the years 1762-1775.

Coming to light in the Treasurer's office in the Capitol some years ago, the manuscript was moved, with other volumes in that office, to the State Library Building. Quite properly its original place would have been in the archives of the ancient colonial Council or of the Secretary of the Colony, at Williamsburg. Probably it was brought to Richmond when that city became the capital of the State during the Revolution, and may have been among the records saved from fire when the General Court Building was burned in 1865.

In the manuscript are represented, in 253 lists of names, sixty-one counties, the whole number existing in 1775. They were Accomac, Albemarle, Amelia, Amherst, Augusta, Bedford, Berkeley, Botetourt, Brunswick, Buckingham, Caroline, Charles City, Charlotte, Chesterfield, Culpeper, Cumberland, Dinwiddie, Dunmore (subsequently Shenandoah), Elizabeth City, Essex, Fairfax, Fauquier, Fincastle (subsequently Montgomery, Washington and Kentucky), Frederick, Goochland, Gloucester, Halifax, Hampshire, Hanover, Henrico, Isle of Wight, James City, King and Queen, King George, King William, Lancaster, Louisa, Loudoun, Lunenburg, Mecklenburg, Middlesex, Nansemond, New Kent, Norfolk, Northampton, Northumberland, Orange, Pittsylvania, Prince Edward, Prince George, Prince William, Princess Anne, Richmond, Southampton, Spotsylvania, Stafford, Surry, Sussex, Warwick, Westmoreland and York.

The 253 lists contain an aggregate of 4,957 names. Only two counties have but one list each. Four counties have eight lists each. The range in number of lists for other counties includes three counties having seven lists each and fourteen having four lists each. There are frequent repetitions of the names of the same individuals in lists in different years or at different times within the same year, in lists showing removal from one county to another and in lists reflecting the creation of new counties from parts of old ones, as, for instance, Botetourt from Augusta, and Fincastle from Botetourt. So, the 4,957 names actually represent approximately 2,000 individuals.

There is no unvarying chronological or alphabetical order in the arrangement of the lists. The first entry is headed "King William, April 11th, 1764." Across the page from it is "King George, November 22nd, 1762." On page 2¹ "Lancaster, July 30, 1762," is opposite "Louisa, December 21, 1764," and is followed by "Goochland, December 21, 1764." On page 4 "Albemarle, April 10, 1761," follows "Middlesex, June 12, 1765," and is followed on page 5 by "Nansemond, May 2, 1764." On page 6; "Northumberland, June 7, 1757," is followed by "Northumberland, April, 1762." Even where there are a number of counties carrying the same date, for example, November 6, 1766, no order in arrangement in the manuscript is apparent.

Entries were made at different times and by different hands. This variation is also marked in the notations upon the lists as a whole or upon individual names. Among the latter are, written out or abbreviated, such memoranda as "dead," "removed," "refuses," "to be left out," "refuses to qualify," "not in county," "resigned for five years," "removed out of the colony" and "out of colony."

In 250 of the lists the justices of the quorum are indicated. In seventy-three of the lists the sheriff is designated, and in seven of them the clerk.

Twenty-one of the lists have no comment indicating what use was made of them, seventy-five of them have notation that commission was issued, and one hundred and fifty-seven of them are marked only as having been examined. The record as to commission, in full or abbreviated, is "General Commission Issued" or "General Commission of Oyer and Terminer Issued," in one case, that for Loudoun County, June 15, 1768, the phrasing being "General Commission of Oyer and Terminer and Dedimus issued."

Seldom is there a notation, as that on the list for Orange county, April 12, 1768, showing that the commission had been issued on the date at the head of the list. The list for James City county, dated at its head, June 12, 1767, was marked, "Ex'd Reversed by the Governor." The list, repeated on the same page and as of July 8, 1767, was marked "Exam'd Gen^l Comⁿ Iss^d 12th Dec^r 1767."

¹The manuscript is not folioed. Numbers used here are to identify pages.

The first record of a general commission issued is on the list for Lancaster county, dated July 30, 1762, and the last is on the list for Warwick county, dated October 25, 1770:

The list for Princess Anne county, dated November 24, 1762, has record of commission issued as of December 15, 1767, and the one for Fairfax county, dated December 7, 1764, has a record as of November 21, 1767.

Dunmore county, created from a part of Frederick county under an act of Assembly of 1772, and later becoming Shenandoah county, appears only twice in the manuscript. Its list for October 26, 1773, has the notation: "The Commission of the Peace for this miscarried, and must be sent to the Clerk when the Governor comes to Town."

Under the list for Accomac county, dated June 13, 1771, is the abbreviation "ch," for "charged." This notation as to charging appears thirty-five times, the last time on the list for Augusta county, April 20, 1775, the last entry in the manuscript.

Under the first list in the manuscript—that for King William county, dated April 11, 1764—are the words: "See at the other end for the Lists of Justices for 13 Counties."

There is nothing to suggest what is meant by "the other end." On the last eight pages of the volume are the lists for thirteen counties, one of the counties—Norfolk—having three lists, dated 1773, 1774 and 1775, respectively, and one county—Augusta—having two lists, dated 1774 and 1775, respectively. The last entries—those for Norfolk, Accomac and Augusta—are as of April 20, 1775. In the early morning of that day, Governor Dunmore had caused the powder to be removed secretly from the magazine at Williamsburg. Thenceforth he had no concern about commissioning justices in Virginia. If pages 98-105 are "the other end" mentioned on page 1, there is nothing in the list of the thirteen counties—Accomac, Augusta, Bedford, Botetourt, Brunswick, Buckingham, Dinwiddie, Essex, Lancaster, New Kent, Norfolk, Pittsylvania and Princess Anne, all as of 1774, with three repeated in 1775—indicating why they should have been chosen from among many others for special mention on the first page of the record.

It is possible that the mention may have referred to a list of counties of an earlier date than 1775, thus pointing toward the year when the record was begun. It may have been that that year was 1767. In the last two months of that year, a few weeks before the death of Lieutenant Governor Fauquier, commissions for twenty-nine counties were issued, twenty of them on December 15. Records of them are scattered over pages 5 to 31, inclusive, together with records of eight commissions issued, with no date given, seven issued in 1768, one issued in January, 1767, and forty-five lists with no record of commission. The data of twenty-nine counties, including the numbers of the pages upon which the lists of Justices appear, the dates at the heads of the lists and the dates of the commissions, follow:

Fairfax	31	December 11, 1767	December 15, 1767

Within the space of less than four weeks, two commissions were issued for Fairfax county. The commissions for Northumberland and Caroline counties were issued on the same dates as those carried at the head of the lists of Justices, a marked variation from the usual procedure. The arrangement of the lists on pages 20-31 has a semblance of approach to chronological order. These facts suggest that the compilation of the record may have been begun in 1767, as Governor Fauquier issued, under a special act of 1765, commissions of Oyer and Terminer to many justices, and that the lists of earlier years were at that time recorded from existing memoranda.²

Such a compilation would have given the Governor a handy working basis for continuing Justices in their positions, for filling vacancies in their number caused by death, removal from a county or disinclination to serve, or for making entirely new appointments. The record, once begun, was probably carried on regularly until royal government in Virginia came to an end. The checking showing that the lists in the compilation had been examined may date from the provision of May, 1776, for continuance of administration of justice by "present Magistrates."³

The number of names in the 253 lists in the manuscript ranges from sixteen in Northumberland county, June 7, 1757; thirteen in Orange county, May 24, 1760, and sixteen in Albemarle county April 10, 1761, the lists bearing the earliest three dates, to seventeen in Accomac county, twenty-five in Norfolk county and forty-three in Augusta county, all of April 20, 1775, the last three entries. Standing in their respective communities of the men whose names appear in the lists may be fairly indicated in the following groups of four in each of the sixty-one counties of 1775, the selection being made more or less at random:

This title of the individuals whose names appear as of the period 1757-1775 is representative of the larger body of men who administered local justice in colonial Virginia from the time, in 1619, when quasi-military rule over less than 1,500 white persons, comparatively few of them beyond the purview of authorities at Jamestown, began to yield to civil establishment. Between that time and 1634, when the country was divided into eight shires—James City, Henrico, Charles City, Elizabeth City, Warwick River, Warrosquyoake, Charles River and Accomack⁴—commanders of plantations were succeeded, as judges, by commissioners of monthly courts and marshals by sheriffs.⁵ Monthly courts became county courts in 1643,⁶ and commissioners became Justices of the Peace in 1662.⁷

Appointment of Justices of the Peace lay with the Governor and Council in the early stages of county development.⁸ During the interregnum of the Commonwealth there were reflections of political tendencies of the period in attempts to modify such practice. Under Acts of the General Assembly the variations between 1652 and 1658⁹ included election of the officials by the House of Burgesses, appointment of them by the Governor and Council upon recommendation by those already in office, limitation of appointment to such persons as should be "desired by the court," with a proviso a year later, "and confirmed by the Assembly." Upon the restoration of royal government, appointment of the Justices of the Peace was again centered in the Governor where it remained.¹⁰

Apparently, the number of commissioners, or justices, for a county or corporation was determined at first by the pleasure of the appointing power or the ability to get men to serve. One of the earliest commissions, that of March 20, 1629, for Elizabeth City, was to eight men, including two captains and two lieutenants. In commissions issued three years later, the number ranged from five to seven men. Within the next twenty-eight years there must have been a great expansion in the number for other reasons than necessity to meet an increase and a scattering of the population. For, two years after the return of Governor Berkeley to power, it was deemed necessary to pass an act of Assembly containing the following:

“Whereas, the great number of commissioners in each county hath rendered the place contemptible and raysed factions among themselves rather than preserve the peace of the people, Be itt enacted that the commissioners in each county be restrained to the number of eight (of which the sherriffe to be one) being at present the eight first in each commission, unless some knowne defect or too neere relation to some other of the commission shall render them incapable And be itt further enacted that the sherriffes place shall after this yeare be conferred on the first in commission, and so devolve to every commissioner in course.”

This act, re-enforced in 1662, does not seem to have restrained Governor Berkeley. But presently, with an enlargement of the borders of settled areas in the colony, necessity for means of convenient and prompt administration of justice became far more potent than inclination to use appointment of Justices of the Peace to strengthen the personal following of an executive in the enlargement of the body of Justices in the counties. Accordingly, among the revisions of 1710 was an act, virtually repeated in 1748, fixing the number of Justices in each county at eight or more persons, four of whom, one of them being of the quorum, to be the court “according to the ancient custom and usage heretofore in that behalf practised.”¹²

The numbers in the lists in the manuscript indicate that the alternative “or more” had been fully accepted. In lists of 1765, for instance, appear Augusta, with 37; Brunswick, 16; Dinwiddie, 16; King and Queen, 20; Mecklenburg, 13, and Spotsylvania, 21. Under date of November 6, 1766, are Albemarle, 20; Amelia, 23; Amherst, 15; Charlotte, 20; Chesterfield, 22; Elizabeth City, 16; King William, 17; Loudoun, 18; Middlesex, 16; Prince Edward, 18; Prince George, 17, and Stafford, 27.

Monthly courts, with commanders of plantations presiding and with others commissioned by the Governor, were designed to meet conditions in outlying settlements that could not in justice or convenience wait upon the quarter courts held by the Governor and Council at Jamestown. The jurisdiction of these monthly courts, as well as that of individual commissioners, was comparatively narrow. It dealt with fewer than 1,500 persons. With the creation of counties having definite boundaries, the change of name from commissioners to Justices of the Peace, an increase in the number of such officials and in the number of counties as increasing population in Tidewater and Piedmont sent its streams across the Appalachians to people territory stretching away to the Mississippi and the Ohio, the importance of the Justices of the Peace and of the County Courts expanded.

In the period to which the "Lists of Justices" refers, when the population of the colony was approaching 500,000, the County Court consisted of four or more of the Justices, one of whom had to be "of the quorum." The County Court had jurisdiction in all causes in the county cognizable at common law or chancery, except (1) those criminal causes wherein the judgment, upon conviction, should be for the loss of life or member, (2) the prosecution of causes to outlawry against person or persons, and (3) all causes involving less than 25 shillings sterling or 200 pounds of tobacco.¹³

The first two classes of exceptioned causes were for the General Court at Williamsburg. To that Court appeal could be taken from the County Court in other causes except in suits at common law or in chancery in which the debt or damage, exclusive of costs, should not exceed ten pounds in current money or 2,000 pounds of tobacco, unless the title or bounds of lands were in question.

The County Court listed tithables, laid the county levy, recorded land conveyances, bound out poor children to trades, and combined the functions of orphans, probate and claims courts. The chief functionary of the Court, the Sheriff, was one of the Justices of the Peace. It was provided that he was to be appointed by the Governor from among three Justices nominated by the Court, to serve for one year, except in some cases where a term of two years was allowable.¹⁴

At one time, exception was made to the rule of monthly sessions of the County Courts in the cases of Brunswick, Fairfax, Frederick, Lunenburg, Albemarle and Augusta counties, to meet certain local exigencies.¹⁵

The third class of exceptioned causes were determinable by a single Justice of the Peace. He also was empowered to keep the peace generally, by warrant or by hand, and he could cause a traitor, a felon, a pirate, a rioter, a breaker of the peace or other criminal offender to be arrested and brought before him, any other Justice, or the County Court.

The large number of memoranda of commissions of Oyer and Terminer issued in 1767, in the closing months of the Fauquier regime, marks an extension of the powers of the county Justices. That applied especially to the trial of slaves charged with capital crimes. Apprehension on that score had been reflected in Acts of Assembly of 1692, 1705 and 1723, and was such in 1748 that, "to detect and prevent secret plots and dangerous combinations of slaves, free negroes, mulattoes and Indians," an act was passed by the General Assembly authorizing the Governor to issue commissions of Oyer and Terminer to "such persons as he shall see fit," for the trial of such cases.¹⁶ Seven years later Governor Dinwiddie reported to the Commissioners for Trade and Plantations that, for the punishment of slaves committing capital crimes, a commission of Oyer and Terminer was issued by the Governor directed to the Justices of the Peace in the county where the offense had been committed to try the offender without a jury and to award punishment. About the same time, Dinwiddie wrote to Colonel Charles Carter, "The Villany of the Negroes on any Emergency of Gov't is w't I always fear'd."¹⁷

The Stamp Act of 1765 had a prompt reaction in Virginia that may well have been described as an emergency in government. It may, therefore, be regarded as not a mere coincidence that in October of that year the General Assembly formally authorized and enlarged what had, in the exercise of the discretion of the Governor, become a practice. Preamble to an act amending the act of 1748 recited that much unnecessary trouble and expense had been caused in sending to the Governor from different parts of the Colony for commissions of Oyer and Terminer for the trial of each particular slave, "which commissions issue of course to the justices of the county." It was, therefore, enacted that the Governor be empowered to issue commissions of Oyer and Terminer directed to the justices of each county empowering them "to try, condemn and execute or otherwise punish or acquit" all slaves committing capital crimes in the county and, "where any commission for constituting justices of the peace shall thereafter issue, a general commission of Oyer and Terminer for the purposes aforesaid shall be sent therewith, and directed to the same persons."¹⁸

In the light of events of the time this legislation is explanation of the difference in months or in years between the dates heading many of the lists and those indicating the time of the issue of commissions of Oyer and Terminer in 1767, the first date, a memorandum of the usual commission, and the second date, a memorandum of action under the act of October, 1765.

In 1662, attempt was made to establish periodical visitation of County Courts by the Governor and one member of the Council, or by two members of the Council designated by the Governor.¹⁹ The experiment lasted but a few months. It was found to be too expensive.

Bodily presence in the County Courts and active participation in their proceedings by the Governor were not needed to emphasize the widely permeating influence of the central authority at Williamsburg in all parts of the colony through the County Courts and the individual Justices of the Peace. Indeed, such ramifying contact with the intimate concerns of the people was not limited to circumstances of the administration of justice. Many of the Justices of the Peace were also close to fellow-citizens by virtue of their positions as Vestrymen, who had duties touching the conduct of parishioners. Many of them, too, were to be found in the House of Burgesses, thus linking together local and general affairs.

One must read the scholarly study by Dr. Philip Alexander Bruce, "Institutional History of Virginia in the Seventeenth Century," to gain a comprehensive grasp of the province of the Justices of the Peace in the first eighty years of the evolution of county government in Virginia. In R. T. Barton's introduction to "Virginia Colonial Decisions" (Boston, 1909) is found a very satisfactory treatment of the whole subject of colonial Virginia Courts, and the same may be said of Oliver Perry Chitwood's "Justice in Colonial Virginia" (Nos. 7 and 8 of Series 23 of the Johns Hopkins University Studies in Historical and Political Science; Baltimore, 1905). For accurate knowledge of the history of the formation of the counties, one must consult the interesting and valuable product of research, "Virginia Counties; those Resulting from Virginia Legislation," by Morgan Poitiaux Robinson, State archivist, published as a bulletin of the State Library.

The manuscript known as "List of Justices" complements and is supplemented by such standard works by Virginians as William Meade's "Old Churches, Ministers and Families of Virginia," Lyon Gardiner Tyler's "Encyclopedia of Virginia Biography," and William G. and Mary Newton Stanard's "The Colonial Virginia Register."

Biographical details thus accessible will prove that, from the body of Justices of the Peace graduated carvers from the wilderness of civilized communities and great Commonwealths, creators of advanced forms of human government in a new land, eminent leaders in military matters affecting the whole human race, and in lay affairs of church and State, Presidents, Cabinet members, Senators and Representatives in the Congress, Governors, State law-makers and lawgivers, and most efficient peacemakers in quiet, undramatic, but not the less telling, walks of life.

¹⁹Hening, II, 64.

Tendency of the office of Justice of the Peace to become, by custom only, hereditary was to some extent apparent. That was natural in a social constitution such as that which developed during a century and a half of land acquisition in colonial Virginia. Personal favoritism on the part of a Governor and appreciation of the opportunity in appointments to the office of Justice offered for bulwarking an administration at the colonial capital may have figured now and then in the situation. Politics and human nature of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries were no whit different essentially from human nature and politics in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries.

Judging, however, by the 2,000 names in the following lists belonging to the years immediately preceding the American Revolution, the colonial Justices of the Peace fairly met the requirements of the act of Assembly of 1662, that they were to be "of the most able, honest and judicious persons of the county."²⁰

Justices of the Peace, in positions of honor and service and not of emolument, represented the genuine aristoi of colonial Virginia.

†Several of the names on this list are in the original written on the side of the column. "James Coleman" is the 9th name on the list; not the 12th, as, after the insertion of three of the names on the side, it appears above. The meaning of the note "10 for the Q" alongside the name of Matthew Simms appears to be that there are to be ten members of the quorum, of whom Matthew Simms is to be one.
